

Comes to Fayetteville/Cumberland County, NC

This past July, Extreme Makeover: Home Edition surprised one lucky military family with a new house.

Barbara Marshall, a Navy veteran, was selected because of her efforts to end homelessness among women veterans by opening the Jubilee House. Everyone in Fayetteville pitched in to help, and even First Lady Michelle Obama stopped by to lend a hand.

America's First Military Sanctuary Community is known for its support of the military and their families.

Fayetteville was recently named as an All-American City for the third time. It was also chosen as the location for the North Carolina Veterans Park. This fall, Fayetteville also will host Heroes Homecoming, a 10-day celebration honoring Vietnam veterans.

The Army's Army and the USO were the only two military support organizations asked to take a lead role in the build.

Here's what happened that week:

A Fayetteville Community Pep Rally, with over 450 attendees.

A "Heroes, Hearts and Hard Hats" Community Festival, with over 1,500 attendees.

7 Days of Building and Filming, with 4,000 volunteers, 33,000 man hours and thousands of spectators.

For more information on how to get involved with The Army's Army, visit www.armysarmy.com.

For more information on planning a visit to Fayetteville/Cumberland County, visit www.visitfayettevillenc.com.

Before Demolition

Michelle Obama Drops In

Volunteers

The Army's Army Crew

After Build

